

Unasked Questions

Kai von Fintel (MIT)

A number of languages have ways of marking a question as one that the addressee is not obligated to answer. Examples include Greek “araye”, Turkish “acaba”, Japanese “naa”, German-verb final questions with “wohl”, and several others. These non-canonical questions raise important questions for the semantics and pragmatics of questions. In this talk, we explore the phenomenon and its theoretical consequences.